Senator Alan Cranston,
New Senate Office Building,
Washington, D.C. 20510.

Dear Senator Cranston,

Intelligence reports which are prepared by our various intelligence gathering agencies are suppose to be non-biased and pure in the information presented. These reports as you know are passed to responsible government officials (policy makers) so that they may formulate plans and strategies which best serve the American people and promote peace in the world.

It seems that the present administration is ordering that intelligence reports be altered to support established and in place Latin American Policy. Such an alteration of an intelligence document involving a CIA report on Mexico was reported in an article in the Christian Science Monitor on 10/1/1984 on page twenty-one.

Supposedly the analyst who prepared the report was instructed by CIA Director Mr. William Casey, to alter the report so that the report would provide support for the Administration's in place Latin American Policy.

You are requested to ascertain if this occurrence was accurately reported in the referenced newspaper. If the article is true, then you do not have to be told that our whole intelligence gathering network and the reports that are generated are ALL in question. Also, if the report is true, then this nation is in grave political, economic, and military danger!

If this situation is true then the Congress should insist upon the removal of Mr. William Casey from his position and President Reagan should be called upon for a detailed explanation! If one report was altered then be assured tha many other reports pertaining to other world areas have also been altered for the same reason or other unknown reasons.
